"Something is missing from a community built with churches and temples of all kinds. People see something with missionary societies, hospitals, doctors, schools and stores. People are missing the church, the temple of the community, which serves as a place of peace and order. People need a place where they can meet and talk, and a place where they can worship and pray. People need a place to feel safe and secure. People need a place to be heard and to be understood. People need a place to be loved and to be respected. People need a place to be free and to be equal. People need a place to be human and to be dignified. People need a place to be God and to be himself. People need a place to be alive and to be dead.
