

Fultz Quads Celebrate Sixth Birthday

'Such Pretty Little Girls!' That's the usual comment when someone sees the quads for the first time. All have sparkling brown eyes and clear skin.

Anne, Alice, Catherine and Louise made it a Big Day!

Like 6-year-olds everywhere, the world-famous Fultz quads think birthdays are next-best to Christmas, celebrated with cake, presents, new clothes—and enjoyed a day with the photographer who had a hard time keeping up with the lively, pretty little girls.

The quads, who still live in the nursery built for them by Pet Milk Company, look more alike than ever. Only their parents and nurse, Mrs. Elma Saylor, can tell which is which and they aren't always sure. Right now, though, it's easy to tell which is Catherine—she's lost three baby teeth! The four little girls are all sturdy, happy, fun-loving—still drinking Pet Milk, recommended by the doctor when they were born.

Good Listeners!:: Brightly colored phonograph is prized possession. Quads have own record collection, play favorites often.

Readin' 'n' Writin' 'n'... No school for them yet, but quads like to draw, color, look at pictures. Anne and Catherine are left-handed.

'Ready in a Minute!' Like little ladies everywhere, quads need a little extra time for last steps in getting dressed. They think it's a big thing to be able to dress themselves now.

Four Part Harmony... Quad quartette sings well and loves it, according to Mrs. Saylor, shown here with them. They've learned many popular songs and hymns.

Music-Makers; Too! Girls are fascinated by band instruments (birthday gift from Pet Milk Company). "They need some practice, though!" laughs Mrs. Saylor.

Fashion Plates! Smartly dressed in new navy coats, white hats and gloves, red purses; girls start off for a visit. Clothes for all four are bought by Mrs. Saylor, who takes one quad along to try them for size.
